Proverbs 22:6

Acts 11:23, 18 (referenced)

Happy Teacher's Day!

Today, we take a moment to express our deepest gratitude and appreciation for all of you — the teachers who dedicate themselves to nurturing young minds and shaping future generations.

Just as a farmer diligently sows seed in hope of a fruitful harvest, so you, too, plant seeds of knowledge, wisdom, and understanding in the fertile ground of young minds. The impact of your dedication, patience, and love extends far beyond the walls of the classroom, echoing through the years, and shaping the adults your students will one day become.

Proverbs 22:6 reminds us: "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it." You embody this verse, guiding your students along the path of lifelong learning, critical thinking, and moral character.

Like Barnabas, who encouraged and strengthened the early Church (Acts 11:23), you offer your students unwavering support, and belief in their potential; and like Apollos, known for his eloquence and his knowledge of Scripture (Acts 18:24-25), you illuminate the world for your students, making complex ideas accessible, and inspiring in them a love of learning.

The task of teaching is not without its challenges, but your unwavering commitment shines through. You are not merely teachers of subjects, but cultivators of character, sowers of hope, and builders of dreams.

May you find great joy and renewal in your calling, knowing that your influence bears fruit for generations to come. Your dedication is a priceless gift to our children, to our communities, and to our world.

Blessings and heartfelt thanks on this special day!
